

Privacy Policy

Our website host automatically collects non-personally-identifiable information such as:

- type and version of browser used
- type of operating system
- network location and IP address
- time of visit
- number of pages visited and time spent on each page
- referring link (how did the visitor get to this site)

The only personal information we gather is the data you explicitly and voluntarily supply to us when you fill out any of the contact forms; this includes your first and last names, telephone number, email address, and health insurance carrier. We do not give, sell, rent, or transfer your personally identifiable information to anyone unless required by applicable law or a court order. Information submitted via email is not secure from interception and we advise you to avoid including any information that is of a sensitive or confidential nature. We will not accept liability for unintentional disclosure. We use industry best practices to protect your information on our systems. Your use of our website is subject to, and indicates acceptance of, this Privacy Policy.